A GREAT SURPRISE.

A great yellow sunflower grew so tall. It looked right over the garden wall. "Bless me," cried he, "what a marvelous sight!"

Wonderful meadows to left and right; And a hill that reaches up to the sky, And a long, straight road where the folk go by.

"Twice lucky for me that I grew so tall As to see the lands that lie over the wall."

I hadn't the faintest idea," said he, "How much of a place the world might be!"

Youth's Companion.

DR. DAWSON'S WARD.

Dr. Arthur Dawson rose from his easy chair, and welcomed to his comfortably furnished consulting room the well-dressed, young man who had called his servant and just handed him.

"Always glad to see you, George. I think I can guess what your visit means. You wish to ask me to consent to your engagement to Laura?"

George Abbot felt far more nervous than on the well-remembered occasion of making his first speech to a jury, and stammered out, "Yes, sir. But how did you know?"

"Laura has said nothing to me. But it is said, you know, that 'lookers-on see most of the game,' and your attentions were such as no honorable man would offer without serious intentions."

"The you consent?" the young man broke in.

"If, after you have heard the story I am about to relate to you, you still persist in your request for my ward's hand."

"Your ward?"

"Yes, Laura is not my own child. She is my adopted daughter, and I love her as dearly as, twenty-five years ago, I loved her poor, ill-fated mother. But listen to her father's history."

"After passing through Guy's, and being duly licensed to kill," said the doctor, "I proceeded to India, having obtained a Government appointment in the land of cholera and cholerae. I was there fifteen years and was resident surgeon at Berri-Berri Barracks. In the Neigherry Hills, when I first met Capt. Kerr. He was a tall, undeniably handsome man, probably about thirty years of age."

"The colonel of his regiment was Walter White, whose flag I had been at Winchester. I was a frequent visitor at his bungalow, and one of the pleasantest of the colonel's friends. I was his lovely daughter. Even now I recall her willowy figure, her merry laugh, her flaxen ringlets, and trustful, violet eyes. But I needn't enter upon a description of her; her daughter is her living image."

"Laura—her child bears her name—had many suitors, and among them was Rupert Kerr. The Captain was generally looked upon as the lucky man; and, by degrees, and without any of the usual preliminaries, he and Laura were betrothed. The betrothal was a secret, and the betrothal was a secret."

"One day a startling rumor passed round the camp. I heard of it as I made my morning round, and, though I pooh-poohed it, it still gained currency. Men said that Capt. Kerr had been secretly married, more than a year ago, to a half-caste woman at Bombay, and that she had appeared in camp to claim her rights as his wife."

"For the men, at which Col. White and the Captain were both absent. I was summoned to the Colonel's bungalow, and I went across at once, and found that poor Laura was in a high fever. Her father and mother were endeavoring to calm her, but in vain, and over and over she would shriek: 'My betrothed! My betrothed! You're not mine! Not mine, oh dear! and then would follow a burst of tears. I then learnt that the sinister rumor was no unfounded gossip, but the plain, unvarnished truth."

"On returning to my quarters I was astonished at finding Capt. Kerr awaiting me. 'Ha! Doctor,' he exclaimed, as he saw me, 'I want you to come over and see my—my wife,' with a curiously hard intonation of the last word."

"I resumed my hat, which I had laid aside, and followed him to his bungalow. On my way I asked, 'What are the symptoms?'"

"Well, she is sleeping, and has been sleeping since noon, and I can't awaken her," was the answer.

"On a couch in the verandah was stretched an exceedingly fat mulatto woman, with brown features, and a curiously puckered skin. She was lying on her back and was snoring like a steamer."

"I grasped her arm and felt her pulse. It beat fast and irregularly. The Captain stood at the head of the sofa and leant over her. Almost at that instant the woman awoke, and poured forth such a voluble string of the most awful language (English and Hindustani) that even I shrank back appalled."

"The Captain motioned me to the door. 'She's come around, Doctor, so there's no necessity for your kind services. I will only ask you not to describe Mrs. Kerr to the men.' I gave the required pledge and left him."

"For some weeks I attended Mrs. Kerr in her apparently cataleptic trances. They came at irregular intervals, and were always marked by similar symptoms."

"My other patient, Laura White, had by this time recovered, but was hardly more than the shadow of her old sunny self. Naturally, Kerr was cut by the regiment, and for one, felt sincerely glad when it was announced that he had exchanged into a home regiment and would shortly sail for England."

"My affection for Laura was only strengthened, and one day, after paying my morning visit, I asked her, in her father's presence, to become my wife."

"She burst into tears, and when she had recovered her composure, she answered: 'I feel that I am honored by the affection of a good and noble man, and though I cannot give you the love I ought, I will try to make you a good and faithful wife.'"

"On the day that our engagement was published, Kerr's wife died. I was present when she passed away in a cataleptic fit, and gave my certificate to that effect. As is usual in 'hot climates,' she was buried within twenty-four hours."

"Forty-eight hours later my brief cup of happiness was dashed to the ground. Capt. Kerr had left for Enzland, and Laura White had died with him. They had been married in Bombay, and had sailed for England before I returned to England that port."

"I returned to England a few months later, and found that Kerr had never entered upon his duties in his new regiment, but had sent in his papers immediately after his arrival. I sought for news of them, but could learn nothing."

"About three years later I read in the papers the announcement of Laura Kerr's death. It had taken place at Cheltenham, to which town I at once proceeded. Here my inquiries led to the fact that she had died in lodgings in the High Street, and that her husband had taken his departure immediately after the funeral, accompanied by his little daughter. The lady of the lodgings gave me the address of the medical man who had attended her, and on his I at once called. He courteously answered my inquiries, and informed me that the cause of death was catalepsy."

"Catalepsy again! That was indeed singular. But my suspicions were not as yet awakened. There was no trace of Kerr or his child, and I could do nothing."

"Another period of three years passed, and I had set up my brass plate here in Birmingham, and had built up a prosperous and remunerative practice. One lovely summer afternoon I received a telegraphic call to an accident case at Dudley. The carriage came and I started. But we had not passed through Handsworth when it became evident that one of the horses was dead lame. I accordingly dismissed the carriage, and decided to complete the journey by cab. This was done, and it was nearly nine o'clock when, after partaking of some food, I left my patient's house."

"There is always a scarcity of cabs in the outlying parks of the Black Country, and I had perforce to make my return by tram. At Handsworth I changed on to a cable tram, and mounted to the top of the vehicle to enjoy a cigar in the pleasant night air."

"My nearest neighbor on the tram was a tall, shaven-headed, and with short iron-gray hair, and apparently fifty years of age, though he might be younger. He had mounted the vehicle at its first stopping place, bearing in his arms a little girl—a wee winsome maiden of four or five summers, with long silken blonde hair and lovely violet eyes. Surely I had seen those eyes before! I could not see the man's face; it was too dark a night."

"Suddenly, from some failure of the brake, our car collided roughly with a tall, shaven-headed, and with short iron-gray hair, and apparently fifty years of age, though he might be younger. He had mounted the vehicle at its first stopping place, bearing in his arms a little girl—a wee winsome maiden of four or five summers, with long silken blonde hair and lovely violet eyes. Surely I had seen those eyes before! I could not see the man's face; it was too dark a night."

"I had never seen such horror and dismay as blazed forth in an instant; the silent, self-contained man snatched up his child's senseless form, sprang to his feet and almost screamed: 'My child is hurt! Run for a doctor, don't lose a moment. I put my hand on his shoulder, and said, quietly, 'I am a medical man, and as I saw those steady gray eyes, I added, 'Capt. Rupert Kerr.'"

"He turned angrily upon me, and I thought he was about to strike me. Then he remembered his little one, and said: 'Dr. Dawson, I did you a great wrong once. But be merciful, and save her child!'"

"The child was carried downstairs and into a shop close by. I took out my instrument case, but, etc., and washed, stitched and bandaged the wound in the baby's forehead. Then I asked, 'Where do you live? I will see her safely to bed. Thank you,' was the sudden response, 'my address is my own business, and I carried my child out, got into a cab with her, and said, 'Birmingham' to the driver. There was no means of stopping him, but I had presence of mind enough to jot down that driver's number on my shirt-cuff."

"The next day I employed a secret inquiry agent to find Rupert Kerr. He had driven to New Street, taken a fresh cab, and doubled back to Handsworth, where he directed the cabman to take him to 17 Roman road. The second cabby had been found through the help of the police at New Street station."

"I now did what should have been done before. While the first agent was instructed to find out Kerr's present manner of life, a second detective was sent to Clendennin to inquire into his earlier proceedings."

"Kerr was, as I had always known, an inveterate gambler. It was ascertained that he had brought to England with him the greater portion of his first wife's property, and had almost dissipated this, when poor Laura's death put him in possession of her father's savings, for poor Col. White had died soon after his daughter's departure, and had bequeathed his possessions to her. Moreover, both wives had been heavily insured. From the other detective I learnt that he followed no occupation, but frequented betting clubs and hotel-bars, and seemed to be rather deeply involved. Moreover, it was popularly believed that he would soon marry a lady of supposed wealth, whose acquaintance he had made at a local garden party."

"The inquiry agent, had also ascertained that his daughter Laura had recently been insured for 500 pounds. She had hitherto enjoyed absolutely good health, but since the assurance had been completed she had suffered from cataleptic fits."

"When this last development of the situation reached me, my smouldering suspicions of the man blazed into flame at once. Remembering that Percival, who had been stationed with the cavalry brigade at the cantonment, was then in command at Lichfield, I wired to him to come over at once 'on a matter of life and death'—as I really feared it was."

"Gen. Percival arrived that night, and we sat up till dawn discussing the state of affairs. He had remained in India some years later than I had, and was able to give me a clew. It seems that previous to his marriage with the half-caste woman who was his first wife, Kerr had been on terms of friendship with several Brahmin magnates."

"His most usual associate was a man named Sagar Nani—and this same fellow had afterward been convicted of poisoning his brother and had been hanged for the crime."

"We at last resolved to seek the advice and assistance of the local police."

"Accordingly, Swanson and I, accompanied by the police doctor and the inspector, returned to the chamber of death. The injection was made. For a moment there was absolute quiescence, then, by little and little, the signs of returning life were perceived. Gradually life and warmth of color returned to the wan and pallid corpse; faint pulsation became apparent; the eyelids quivered, and a deep sigh told us that for once the Angel of Death had yielded up his prey."

"As the police could not prove that Kerr had caused the catalepsy, the prosecution broke down and he was discharged. He was immediately arrested, and, murdering his second wife, and remanded."

"An order from the Home Secretary having been obtained, Mrs. Kerr's body was exhumed. A most awful spectacle was revealed; the unhappy girl—she was only in her 21st year—had been buried alive! or, rather, the influence of this horrible invention, this fiend-wrought catalepsy, had been exhausted after burial, and—no, I can't dwell upon any sleep of it. I leave for his love for the little maid marked the one soft spot in the demon's heart."

"Laura came to my house and has been brought up as my daughter. The brain fever that followed that awful trance swept all memory of her real father, and I never intend her to be enlightened about him."

"Now, George," concluded the doctor, "that you know the stock that Laura Kerr has sprung from, do you still desire to make her your wife?"

George Abbot rose. "I say what I believe. Doctor, if I say that I cannot possibly affect a girl's character, I love Laura; Laura loves me; and I would make her my wife if her father had committed every crime in the Newgate calendar."

The doctor opened the study door and called—"Laura!" In a moment or two a young lady in evening dress, and looking bewilderingly pretty in her confusion, tripped into the room. She had been awaiting the result of George's interview with papa in considerable trepidation of mind.

"George has something to tell you," said the doctor, escaping into the hall and shutting the door.

What George said may be surmised from the fact that an unusually "smart" wedding took place from the doctor's house some six months later.

Not every woman is helpless in combating the difficult details of travel. One who is preparing to sail the latter part of this month applied to the steamship company, from which she has engaged passage, for a passport. She was informed that for first-class passengers the charge would be $5, second-class, $3, and steerage, $1. It struck her that this was too much for one who was proposing to travel on an exceedingly economical basis. She, therefore, wrote to the passport department at Washington, procured the necessary blanks, filled them out before a notary, and got her papers for less than a dollar.

Building Stopped for Pigeons. Although London is popularly supposed to consist exclusively of brick and mortar, it still contains many students of natural history who also hold strongly pronounced humanitarian views. In one of the most retired spots close by Mark Lane, says the City Press, a pair of wood-pigeons are now making a home, and so solicitous about an adjacent building that, in order that the prospective parents may not be disturbed in bringing into the world creditable offspring, he has decided to suspend for a while sundry building operations which he had intended to commence last week.

More Coal Than Ever. The output of coal in this country increased from 198,504,989 tons in 1897 to 218,492,040 tons in 1898. Every State gained except Illinois, North Carolina and Oregon. Pennsylvania led in actual gain to the extent of 10,000,000 tons. The only other States showing an increase beyond 1,000,000 tons were Ohio, with a gain of 425,000, and West Virginia, with 2,800,720 tons.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

IF PROPERLY PRODUCED IT FULLY EQUALS COMB IN FLAVOR.

A Widespread Prejudice Against the Article Not Without Reason Owing to the Fact That a Large Percentage is Mixed With Glucose.

L. W. Lighty of Adams County, Pa.,
writing to the Country Gentleman says:

Extracted honey, if properly produced and handled, is fully equal to comb honey in flavor and in every other way, in fact, for table use, except that it is not so ornamental. There is a widespread prejudice against extracted honey, not without cause either, as a large percentage of that on the market has been tampered with and is not pure honey, but a mixture of glucose, etc. Again, strained and extracted honey are confounded. Strained honey is taken from the comb by compression and is mixed with pollen and often with smashed bees and brood, and the result is a miserable mess, so that, if a person once buys it for extracted honey, he will after that always shun anything labeled extracted honey. Then again, there is much inferior extracted honey on the market which is not surprising, as the bee-keeper can produce about one-third more of an inferior article than of a superior one, while quality does not count in the general market. As honey is graded as light or dark, flavor does not count, only color.

Comb honey brings about twice as much as extracted. To produce extracted honey does not cost quite as much as to produce comb honey, but it costs considerable more to produce the fine, well-ripened, delightfully flavored, smooth, oily article for table use than to produce that thin, green, stringy, ill-flavored article that can be used only in baking, etc. To produce a really fine article, we must allow the bees fully to ripen the honey, and while they are doing this they usually cap most of it. Thus it can be seen that the bees must employ their time and energy in giving it the finishing touches that make it what tradition paints it—one of the finest food luxuries of the world, or, as a poetically inclined writer says: "The amber richness garnered in the comb is a distillation of composite nature—a brew of flower-life and bee-life indescribably characteristic of both flower and bee." Had he tasted some of the stuff called honey at the corner grocery, he would doubt his fancy would have taken a different turn.

If we extract the honey or nectar as soon as gathered, the bees can use all their energy of gathering and we can extract without uncapping, which saves considerable time. At present prices the temptation is often too strong for the bee-keeper and the result is artificially ripened honey which is no honey at all, but an insipid sweet that has lost all the aroma of the flowers and the life atmosphere during the process of evaporation. As for honey for example, if extracted green has a strong blinding almond flavor and is not fit to eat; but some years ago we had a very late fall and the bees ripened up a lot very nicely which I extracted, and experts pronounced it equal to the finest basswood honey.

As soon as the honey is extracted, it should be put into air-tight vessels, and the fine aroma will be preserved. Tin cans with a screw cap are most convenient, but I prefer a tin pail with a rather deep lid slipping over the outside which I seal with hot wax and then paste the label right over the joint so the pail cannot be opened unless my label is broken. I prefer this pail because the honey can be cut out without heating as much; honey is ruined by overheating in liquefying. Good honey will nearly always candy at the approach of cold weather, and many people, if they are used to it in the candied condition, prefer it in that way, and the pail is the ideal receptacle to get the candied honey out. After the honey is out the vessel can be utilized by the consumer, and this is appreciated by my buyers. I have often noticed people who bought honey in cans with screw caps when the honey would not flow setting the can on the hot stove; this will in a very short time ruin the finest honey. Where the honey can be cut out in a beautiful curled slice this will not occur.

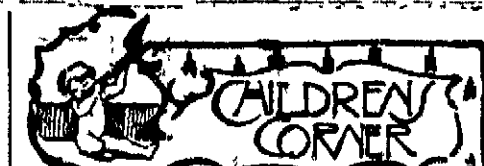

A Sheep Trough. An Iowa Homestead writer has a trough which he considers peculiar to his own view of what a sheep trough ought to be. It is so constructed as to be convenient for both sheep and lambs. No sheep will jump into the trough, and lambs will not lie in it as they will in larger ones. First take one six-inch board the desired length and bevel its edges a little for the bottom. Nail to this two more six-inch boards for the sides, so the tops will flare a little. Use a four-inch board for a guard rail with supports at each end at the middle of a long trough. The figure shows a view of the end of the trough in a perspective. The legs are made of 2x4 stuff.

Try to Raise Too Much.

A common mistake is to plow more land than can properly be prepared, fertilized and taken care of. Because of this we often get not more than half a crop and our land is poorer instead of richer. We should not plow more land than we can manure well before seeding. We must prepare our soil better, fertilize better and take better care of the crops. In this way we will raise larger crops with less labor and our land will become richer. The most frequent causes of loss or failure is in trying to raise too much, and some are always behind hand with their work, hence crops are not put in in proper season, are not cultivated when they should be, and the consequence is a failure or loss of the crop.—Renben Terpenning, Oswego Co., N. Y.

ISN'T IT AWFUL.

There is a little maiden
Who has an awful time;
She has to hurry awfully
To get to school at nine.

She has an awful teacher;
Her tasks are awful hard;
Her playmates are awful rough
When playing in the yard.

She has an awful kitty,
Who often shows her claws;
A dog who jumps upon her dress,
With awful muddy paws.

She has a baby sister
With an awful little nose,
With awful cupping dimples,
And such awful little toes.

She has two little brothers,
And they are awful boys,
With their awful drums and trumpets,
And make an awful noise.

Do come, I pray thee, common sense,
Come and this maid defend,
Or else, I fear, her awful life
Will have an awful end.

THE MERCHANT'S LUNCHEON.

The Office Boy's Doughnut Tempted Him—Showed Him Gratitude.

A rich merchant sat at the desk in his office, alone. He leaned back in his chair, and drew a long, hard breath quite like a sigh; for he had been struggling all day with difficult business problems, and he was weary in body and mind. Some people think a rich man never has anything to do; but they little know how hard he often has to work, first to gain and then to keep his riches. It was long past the luncheon hour, and it suddenly occurred to this man that he was faint and hungry; yet he was not ready to leave his work and was about to return to his calculations when he caught sight of a little brown package lying on a shelf near by. It was the package of luncheon which his little office boy brought with him every day, and to-day the boy, having been sent on some distant errand, had not yet had time to partake of it. The merchant arose from his seat, took down the package and looked carefully at it. Just such packages had his own beloved mother tied up for him, when he himself, a poor office boy, first began the career which had brought him to his present splendid position. Slowly he untied the string and opened the package. Two nice sandwiches of fresh home-made bread, with a little cold meat between, a piece of old-fashioned-looking pie, and oh!—a genuine New England doughnut! Tears rose to the eyes of the rich man as memory carried him back to the days of his boyhood, and to the loving deeds of that dear mother. Here was the very luncheon she had often prepared for him! And after a few moments he ate it up, every crumb, with far more enjoyment than an elaborate dinner would have given him, and then, refreshed and comforted, he returned to his work.

Soon after, the belated boy came in, and after reporting to his master, he was surprised to hear him say: "Have you had any luncheon to-day, my boy?" The boy replied in the negative, with a glance at the shelf, when the gentleman said with a smile: "Yes, it is gone. I have eaten it up." Then, handing the astonished boy a five dollar bill, he said: "Go out now and get some luncheon; but I want to thank you for the best one I have had for many a long year. And don't you forget, my boy, to be thankful that you have something which I lost long ago, and that is, a good mother."

Catching and Killing Man-Eaters. How would you like to fish for a sea monster large and strong enough to devour a man at a single meal—a creature whose skin is so rough that it is made into shoes when dry? The man-eating shark is such a creature, and shark-fishing is one of the most exciting sports known to fishermen.

The man who goes shark fishing must provide himself with several feet of stout chain attached to a hook that looks like a small anchor. The fishline is stout rope about as thick as the little finger. The hook is baited with a chunk of meat large enough to feed a small family, and the rope line, chain and hook are then dropped into the sea from the side of a stout rowboat or fishing smack. Sometimes oil is thrown on the water to attract the sharks. When a shark bites and finds that it is hooked it swims away at a fearful speed. Then it is necessary to have many feet of rope to play out till the creature gets tired. When the shark is finally brought to the surface it is killed by a rifle shot. It would be a blessing to ocean bathers if all the sharks could be killed in this way.

He Surprised the Queen. Sir Walter Raleigh made a wager with the queen that he could weigh the smoke from his tobacco pipe. He weighed the tobacco before smoking and the ashes afterwards. When Elizabeth paid the wager she said: "I have seen many a man turn his gold into smoke, but you are the first who has turned his smoke into gold."

CHANGES IN CABINET.

Six Have Taken Place Under Present Administration.

SEC'Y PORTER ALSO RETIRED.

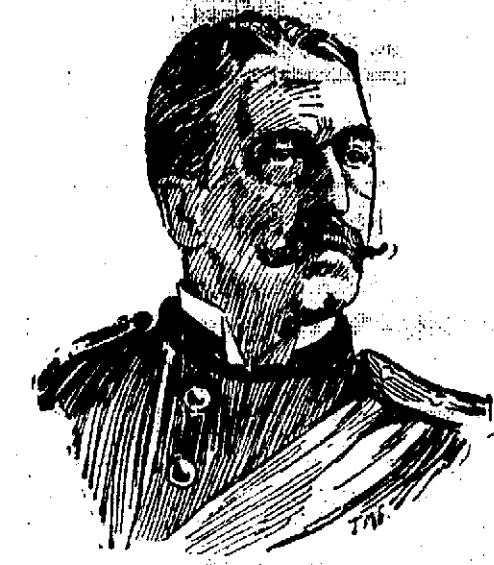

Only Three of the Original Members of the President's Official Family Now Remain.

General Miles Prefers to Remain in Washington to Lay Out Philippine Campaign Plans—Lots of Changes in Washington in Past Two Years.

Washington, July 23.—With Secretary Alger's retirement from the Cabinet, only three of the members who entered it at the beginning of the Administration remain, namely, Messrs. Gage, Long and Wilson. Never before, it is said, have there been so many changes in a President's Cabinet during the first three years of his term. Six Cabinet officers have retired from President McKinley's Cabinet since March 4, 1897. The first to resign was Attorney-General McKenna, who was appointed a Justice of the Supreme Court Bench, and left the Cabinet to accept this place. Postmaster-General Cass retired when war was declared, and soon afterward Sherman left the State Department on account of ill health. When peace was declared, Secretary Day, who had succeeded Secretary Sherman, retired to take the place at the head of the Peace Commission, making the fourth withdrawal. Secretary Bliss retired for business reasons last fall, having stood by the President during the war and seen his successful termination. Now, Secretary Alger hands his resignation to the President, and it is accepted, making the sixth of the original eight to retire.

Not only has the President lost six of his original Cabinet members, but his private secretary, Mr. Porter, has succumbed to overwork and ill health, and has practically retired from Washington official life. Since Congress changed the name of the private secretary to Secretary to the President, it has been practically a semi-Cabinet position, and the change in this place can therefore virtually be classed in the Cabinet changes. Mr. Porter is now in Europe, and it is stated that he may receive a foreign position and remain abroad. At any rate, the President has designated Mr. Cortelyou as Secretary to the President, and he has been occupying this place for many months. So successful has been his administration that it is a foregone conclusion that before long he will not only be entitled to the name but to the rank and all other emoluments of the position.

Gen. Miles, it is now said, does not care to go to the Philippines, but prefers to remain in Washington, for he does not regard it as necessary that he should go there. It is said that his desire is to remain at headquarters in GENERAL MILES.

Washington and select commanders in the field, prepare general plans for an aggressive campaign, and having done this, to leave the field operations to the skill and discretion of the commanders on the battle grounds.

Therefore, all this talk about urging Gen. Miles for the position of commander in the Philippines is not with his consent or desire. Gen. Miles has always been consulted with a commander in selecting for a campaign, and notwithstanding the absurd stories regarding the alleged Gen. Shafter for the Cuban campaign, it can be stated as a positive fact that Gen. Miles was the man who suggested Gen. Shafter as the man to command, and this was done during a conference at the White House soon after the Spanish war was declared, when the President and Secretary Alger were debating whom to put in charge.

The President, in deciding to take a vacation and go to Lake Champlain, has been largely influenced by Mrs. McKinley's health and the advice of the doctor that she needs the change. Mrs. McKinley is improving slowly from her late attack, and the doctor is anxious that she should go to a cooler climate than Washington and has recommended Lake Champlain. Two years ago the President and Mrs. McKinley spent several weeks most delightfully at this place, and remembering that Mrs. McKinley's health was greatly improved by the visit, the President's recent acquiescence in Dr. Rixey's suggestion, and is now arranging for the trip.

The last two and a half years have witnessed a change in many of the plans made for the Cabinet. It had been thought that the Cabinet members would be called upon to do a great deal of entertaining, and that the social side of the Administration would be exceedingly brilliant. It will be remembered, however, that during the first year of the Administration the President lost his mother, and instead of gaiety at the capital there was mourning. Then came the war, and the President and Cabinet were too busy to give much attention to entertainment or society.

RIOTING OUT IN CLEVELAND.

Rioting There Becomes of a Very Serious Nature.

Cleveland, July 23.—The rioting of the striking trolley men has become so lawless that it has been decided to call on the troops to be in readiness. Consequently, the Naval Reserve battalion reported for duty at its armory, and is now prepared to aid the police in keeping order. An attempt was made to blow up a street car with dynamite. The car was on Euclid avenue, returning to the Lake View barns, when a terrific explosion occurred under the wheels at Audland avenue, opposite the home of Henry A. Everett, president of the Big Consolidated Street Railway Company. The car was nearly jolted from the track, but was not stopped. The half dozen passengers on board were frightened badly, but none of them were injured. No harm was done by the car, and it proceeded on its journey. There is no clue to the perpetrators.

Cleveland, O., July 23.—Troops have been ordered to the scenes of rioting here and there are sure to be blooded before the end comes. Tracks are being torn up, cars wrecked and other damage done. The police were totally unable to cope with the serious situation.

TO TAKE STRIKER'S PLACES.

Agent of B. R. T. Engages Many New Employees in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, July 23.—John Walpole of No. 174 Robinson street, Allegheny, a former employee of the United Traction Company, is acting as agent for the Brooklyn and Cleveland traction lines, in obtaining trained persons to work in place of strikers. He started thirty-one motormen to Cleveland, after being scared away from the Pennsylvania station employees in uniform, who hissed him.

On last Sunday he sent fifty men to Brooklyn, these going by way of Cleveland, where they were met by an agent of the Brooklyn traction lines, Walpole says he has sent 137 men from here to take the places of strikers, and he says he can send 100 more by the middle of next week. The majority were discharged recently by the United and Consolidated traction companies. He says he can get all the men needed to take the strikers' places, as better wages are paid in the East than are paid here.

Pig Iron's Great Record.

Philadelphia, July 23.—The Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Association has received from the manufacturers complete statistics of the production of all kinds of pig iron in the United States in the first half of 1898. The production of pig iron in this period was 6,289,167 gross tons, against 5,869,703 tons in the first half of 1898 and 5,604,231 tons in the second half. The production of gross tons, against 3,788,907 gross tons, against 3,703,584 tons in the first half of 1898 and 3,633,840 tons in the second half. The production of basic pig iron, the production of pig iron, against 405,057 gross tons, against 327,485 tons in the first half of 1898 and 447,859 tons in the second half. The production of charcoal pig iron was 128,453 gross tons, against 147,003 tons in the first half of 1898 and 149,747 tons in the second half.

Fought Duel in Saloon.

Bloomfield, N. J., July 23.—A pistol duel took place between Patrolman John R. Baylis and former Patrolman James W. Avery. Avery went to William Hunt's saloon, it is said, pointed a revolver at Mrs. Hunt and asked for money. She called her husband and the bartender, William Cunningham.

Avery flourished the revolver at them. Baylis went out, and Avery followed him twice at him from the saloon floor. Baylis drew his revolver and fired two shots at Avery. One bullet lodged in Avery's right leg above the ankle. Avery then clung to Baylis and a desperate struggle followed, chairs and tables being overturned. Avery ran, aiming his revolver at Baylis's heart, when Cunningham got between them and grabbed the weapon. Baylis finally forced Avery and he was taken to the police station.

The Case of Young Chase.

Lafayette, Ind., July 23.—The hearing of the insanity petition filed by Frederick S. Chase against his son, Moses Fowler Chase, the young millionaire, whose alleged abduction from Detroit by his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Duhamel of Cincinnati, resulted in the detention of young Chase in the insane asylum in New York city, and his release upon Governor Pingree's refusal to grant extradition papers, was before Judge Taylor. The case was continued until the September term of court. The young man's estate is now in the hands of a receiver. He is allowed $500 a month as pin money. The continuance was by mutual consent of interested parties, and forebodes settlement of the controversy out of court.

Young Chase is in Matine for the summer.

Mrs. Holladay Released.

St. Louis, Mo., July 23.—Annie Holladay, who killed her husband five days ago, has been released. She was exonerated by the coroner's jury on the ground of self-defense and the prosecuting attorney refused to grant a warrant charging murder. It is said that she will return to the stage as a trick bicycle rider.

Join Coal Dealers' Association.

Omaha, Neb., July 23.—The Iowa and Nebraska Coal Dealers' association in annual convention, decided to become members of the National Coal Dealers' Association. The convention was notified by the Secretary of the National Coal Association that coal would cost more this fall than last.

Shotgun Felled Elopers.

Knoxville, July 23.—Because her father overtook them with a shotgun, Miss McCree, who walked twenty-eight miles to meet Mr. Johnson, who walked forty miles for that purpose, returned to their homes unmarried.

DON'T LEAVE THE CITY.

Plenty of Proof Here in Portsmouth.

Columbus is one thing, proof another. Columbus claimed the world was round. Did people believe it? Not until he proved it. Unproven claims have made the people skeptics. Every claim made for the "Little Conqueror" is proven. Proven in Portsmouth by local experience.

It doesn't what we say, but what your neighbors say.

Doan's Kidney Pills are endorsed by citizens.

Here is one case from the many we have.

Mr. L. T. Wilson, sailmaker of Market street, says: "I seldom have anything the matter with my back or kidneys, but I contracted a very bad cold which affected my kidneys, and the upper part of my chest. The kidneys went back on me, causing distressing lameness, some urinary difficulty and I was quite stiffened up. As I had read considerable about Doan's Kidney Pills I went to Philbrick's pharmacy and got a box. They went to the spot at once and I did not use but a part of the box before I was quite over my trouble. I know that I did not have a very desperate case, of course, but it was very painful while it lasted, and though the cure came quickly, it was welcome. I gave the balance of my box to a friend who had a bad back and was trying to cure him, although neither of us are very lightweights. I am prepared, from their effect on others, to highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. You can refer to me."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

NEGROES AGAINST WHITES.

Serious Trouble Anticipated in Southern Arkansas.

Pine Bluff, Ark., July 23.—Information received here indicates that the negroes of Lake Village, Chicot County, have arisen against the white people of that vicinity. Lake Village is the county seat and is about twenty-five miles from a railroad. The negroes largely outnumber the white population. The home of B. Vinson, a white attorney, has been burned and the white people are arming themselves for self-protection. Mr. Vinson prosecuted and secured the conviction of a prominent negro named Lightfoot for larceny and Lightfoot's friends were enraged and are inciting the negroes to riot.

It may be necessary for the Governor to send troops before the trouble is abated. Lake Village is in the extreme southern portion of Arkansas.

Smallpox in Pennsylvania.

Altoona, Pa., July 23.—Frank Hiegeist, who died of smallpox, was to have been married this week. His brother John is dying of the same disease. His mother and two other members of the family are recovering. The people about Altoona, where there are nearly 100 cases, complain that the deputies appointed by the State Board of Health to preserve the quarantine break it themselves by making bicycle tours to surrounding towns. The State authorities have been notified. At Irona, where a quarantine was established by the State Board of Health, one of the guards went to sleep at his post. A smallpox patient slipped out, stole the guard's gun and paraded the town, causing great excitement. He was finally captured.

Richmond Shooting Affray.

Richmond, Ind., July 22.—Benjamin Simmons, a liverman, shot and in all probability fatally wounded John E. Webb, a freight brakeman on the Richmond division of the Pan-handle. Simmons used a shotgun, the full charge taking effect in the abdomen of Webb, and producing an immense wound, through which the intestines protruded. Bad feeling has existed between the men for some time.

American's Odd Death.

London, July 23.—The body of a man was found upon the steps of Trinity Church, Landudno, Wales. Death had been caused by a shot from a revolver. In one of the dead man's pockets was found an envelope indicating that his name was Alfred Peole, and that he came from Coal Glen, Colorado. There was also a letter dated April 9, from G. W. Oakes, South Water street, Denver, written upon paper bearing the letterhead of the Continental Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Denver.

Child a Success as Forger.

Anna, Ill., July 23.—Stella Burnell, aged fourteen, forged the name of George C. Parks, a druggist, and of her aunt, Miss Lulu Warner, to four notes amounting to $100, at the First National Bank, the Bank of Anna and the City Bank of Anna. The first note for $25 was forged to obtain money with which to buy a bicycle. The second was forged to pay off the first. She says a business man advised about the methods of forgery.

Nail Causes Lockjaw.

Springfield, Ohio, July 23.—Poster E. Peck, nine-year-old son of E. V. Peck, living four miles east of this city, has died from lockjaw. It originated from a wound he got under the big toe of his right foot in stepping accidentally on a rusty nail.

MORE TRANSPORTS.

Four British Vessels Said to Have Been Chartered.

ARE BOUND FOR MANILA.

300 Range Horses to Be Purchased by Lieutenant-Colonel Randolph in Washington and Oregon.

Troops Will Be Sent From Seattle Instead of From San Francisco Which Has Been the Starting Point for Former Transports—Manila to Get Third Cavalry.

Seattle, Wash., July 23.—Four British vessels are said to have been chartered here by the United States Government for transport service between Seattle and Manila. The steamers Garonne and Port Albert, which are among the largest vessels on the Pacific, are two of those named. The other two are the steamer Victorian, recently transferred from the British flag for the Northern Pacific Company, is to be held for transport service. The Port Albert and Amer will be horse transports, while the Garonne and Victorian will carry troops.

It will be an innovation for the Government to send troops across the Pacific from Seattle. San Francisco has been the starting point since the beginning of the war, except for one cargo sent by the American ship Marlon Chibout.

Lieut.-Col. Randolph is making a tour of Washington and Oregon to purchase 400 range horses. These can be secured very cheaply.

Third Cavalry to Go to Manila.

Washington, July 23.—Orders have been issued by the War Department preparatory to the movement to San Francisco of the eight troops of the Third Cavalry which are to be sent to the Philippines, as told in The Sun this morning. The several troop commanders were informed by telegram that their commands must be ready to proceed to San Francisco at short notice, in order that they might sail thence in three weeks or a month. All of the four troops of the Third now at Fort Myer, Va., will not be kept there to compose the home battalion. Three of them will be sent to the Philippines and their places taken by an equal number of troops from other stations of the Third. The eight troops that will be sent to Manila are C. D. and F. now at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; L. at Fort Sheridan, Ill.; K. at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. and A. D. and M. at Fort Myer. Troop H. now at Fort Myer, will remain there, and the rest of the home battalion will consist of Troop B at Fort Sheridan, G. at Jefferson Barracks and I. at Fort Ethan Allen.

Sick Back From Manila.

San Francisco, July 23.—The transport Indiana has arrived here from Manila with 125 sick soldiers and twenty officers. All the men were able to be about, though some of them showed very plainly the weakness due to fever or wounds. Turning the voyage Private Edward Crawford of Company F, twenty-third infantry, jumped overboard while insane. He became demented on the firing line, and was sent home under guard.

Among the officers who returned are: Col. A. T. Smith, Thirtieth Infantry; Major L. O. Parker, Twenty-second Infantry; Major G. O. Webster, Fourth Infantry; Major P. M. Foot, First Wyoming; Capt. Stephen O'Connor, Twenty-third Infantry; Capt. William M. Patten, Assistant Surgeon, First Washington and Capt. Martin Herpolsheimer, First Nebraska.

Otis on the "Round-Robin."

Washington, July 23.—At the Cabinet meeting the President laid before the members a dispatch from Gen. Otis in regard to the "round-robin" sent by the newspaper correspondents at Manila.

The General treats the subject in an open and frank manner, and shows no irritation or resentment against the correspondents, but rather treats their action as the pranks of children and remarks that the newspaper boys have had a desire to act as journalists and generals rather than as journalists.

He fully and satisfactorily explains the situation between the newspaper men and himself, giving many details in regard to the campaign, showing how the correspondents were wrong in their opinions, and concludes his dispatch by saying that if Washington is willing he greatly desires to remove entirely the censorship at Manila and let every dispatch go as the wind blows, but that he has no fear of letting the people know of every move of the troops under him.

Both Entitled to It.

Newark, Ohio, July 23.—Judge Taylor, in granting a divorce in the George Graff case, said each party was entitled to the decree from the evidence. He let go Mrs. Graff $5,000 alimony and $25 a month for their child's support. Both husband and wife charged cruelty and neglect. Graff is a prominent baker.

SIX ITALIANS LYNCHED.

Reported Work of a Louisiana Mob For Revenge.

New Orleans, La., July 23.—A dispatch from Tallulah, La., says six Italians were lynched there. The names are unobtainable. Dr. Hodges, a prominent physician, of Tallulah, quarreled with an Italian. The latter secured a shotgun and mortally wounded the doctor. The shooting created intense excitement.

He immediately captured the would-be assassin and five of his companions, strung them all up to trees and filled their bodies with buckshot. Tallulah is a small town in Madison Parish, seventeen miles away from the river. It is in the heart of the best cotton-producing section of the State.

Many men prominent in State affairs are residents there and on the surrounding plantations.

Man Was in the "Blower."

Rushville, Ind., July 23.—Mahon Miller, a threshing machine owner, had a narrow escape from death in a peculiar manner near Moscow. Miller has a machine with one of the new blower attachments for automatic strawstacking. The blower was in need of repairs, and Miller crawled into the long pipe to adjust it. While in the blower the machine started, and was running at full speed in a few seconds. Pieces of Miller's clothing were blown out on the strawstack by the wafter, and the man on the stack stopped the machine. Miller was rescued with but little clothes on his body, and almost suffocated.

Home Affairs Need Attention.

Topeka, Kan., July 23.—Gov. Stanley wrote his mind in a letter to J. E. F. Lewis, President of the International Industrial Association of Chicago. Lewis wrote the Governor criticizing the public sentiment and code of morals that would permit recent lynchings in Kansas. Gov. Stanley replied, defending the State, and said: "I would suggest that you might do some good if you would confine your operations to the corruption, crime, and wickedness of your own city. A resident of Chicago is in small business lecturing other people about public morals or obedience to law."

The Means of Earning a Commission.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 23.—Lieut. John K. Miller, in charge of the Wheeling recruiting station, has received instruction from the Adjutant-General at Washington to receive recruits to be furnished from Harrisonburg, Va., and Huntington and Grafton, W. Va., by P. H. A. Dwyer, of Huntington. Upon turning the recruits for the volunteer regiments, the War Department agrees to give Dwyer a second lieutenantcy. Other ex-volunteers in this section are getting ready to win commissions in the same manner.

Gored to Death By a Bull.

York, Penn., July 23.—Ex-State Senator Gerard C. Brown was gored to death by a ferocious Alderney bull at his burying near York, this county. He was dead when found, and a gash on his leg, a severed artery, and the bull's bloody horns and face attested the cause of death. Mr. Brown was fifty-seven years of age, was twice elected to the State Senate, and had a wide State reputation as a Democratic politician and farmer. He was lecturer for the State Grange, Patron of Husbandry, and associate editor of The Farmers' Friend.

Found Dead in the Road.

Hammond, N. J., July 23.—John Miller, a brother of Hansel Miller of this place, was found dead on the roadside a short distance from here. He left his home at Batsto with a horse and carriage to come here on Tuesday. Nothing was heard from him until his search was instituted, and his body found. His neck was broken. The general belief is that his horse ran away, and that he was thrown out of the carriage and killed. What became of the horse and carriage is not known.

The Bonaventure Floated.

London, July 23.—At the office of the British Admiralty it was stated that the British cruiser Bonaventure, reported ashore in a bad position, Cornwall, China, has been floated, and is now en route to Nagasaki. From that place the Bonaventure will proceed to Hongkong for repairs. It is assumed that the cruiser suffered no serious damage by grounding.

Montpelier Gains Through Legacies.

Montpelier, Vt., July 23.—The will of John E. Hubbard, which was filed for probate here, leaves $255,000 to be devoted to public interests. The Kellogg-Hubbard Library, which the testator founded, is given $125,000; the Green Mount Cemetery and Chapel, $25,000, and Capital Hill, which is estimated to be worth $25,000, is left to the city for a public park.

MONDAY, JULY 24, 1899.

Judge Fallon, of Boston, favors the whipping post for wife-beaters. Mere tongue-lashings are not enough for such brutes.

And now it is a molasses trust with a capital of $10,000,000. This, together with the oil trust, simply means a monopoly in sweetness and light.

Mayor Harrison of Chicago has written an article on "The Misgovernment of the Modern City." It is probably a recital of personal experience.

Those St. Louis sages who are trying to invent a new name for this country needn't worry themselves. Plain old U. S. A. will do for a while yet.

There is no striker quite so preposterously foolish as the riotous striker. He is the worst enemy of his own cause, and a menace to the real interest of labor.

It will never be known why Admiral Cervera went west instead of east from Santiago harbor, unless he was prompted by the thought that he might grow up with the country.

On the principle, no doubt, that the laborer is worthy of his hire, Admiral Dewey is not inclined to overlook any claims he may have to a share in the Manila prize money.

Senator Mason of Illinois is still mourning for the poor, downtrodden Philipinos. His woe recalls the spectacle of the American tourist who wept for the death of Adam.

The wife of the American minister and the Queen Regent in Madrid have exchanged calls. The conversation contained no reference to the late unpleasantness other than a chance allusion to sailor hats.

About the worst show that the Boston Philipinos have made of themselves is in refusing to go to Luzon and join Aguinaldo, whom they pretend to admire. He would doubtless give them immediate employment as mule drivers.

Reports from various sections of the country show that the mushroom which isn't a mushroom at all, but a poisonous toadstool, has resumed its deadly career. For persons who are not fungus sharps the only safe mushroom is the one that blooms in a tin can.

Lightning Strikes in Many Places.
Malone, N. Y., July 23.—The most severe electric storm in years throughout Northern New York occurred in this section. The lightning was incessant and sharp for nearly four hours. Communication with the outside districts was crippled badly by telegraph and telephone instruments being burned out. The station at St. Stanislaus, P. Q., on the St. Lawrence and Albany Railway of the New York Central line, was struck by lightning and burned. A tenement house south of Malone was badly riddled by an electric current, but the occupants were unharmed.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., July 23.—The heaviest electrical storm in years has prevailed here for several hours. A number of places have been struck by lightning, and much damage done, especially in the country districts. Just before midnight several fires could be seen down the river and to the east and south. Reports were received of fires in several neighboring villages. The weather is close and oppressive, with indications of continual storms.

Dewey Sues For Prizes.
Washington, July 23.—Admiral Dewey has filed suit in the District Court of the District of Columbia to recover the prize money due him and the officers and crews under him at Manila. This is the regular course of procedure for establishing these claims. The total claim is $751,141, the largest filed since Admiral Farragut brought suit for the value of ships captured at the battles of New Orleans and Mobile Bay.

TO GET RID OF SPANISH PRIESTHOOD.
MANILA, July 23.—A Filipino priest with the insurgents is trying to lead a movement for the independence of his church in the Philippines, from the Spanish priesthood. He has issued a proclamation declaring himself the vicar-general of all the Filipino priests. The U. S. transport Ulander from San Francisco, June 24th, with five companies of the Twenty-fourth infantry and 150 recruits arrived, here today.

STRIKE PRACTICALLY ENDED.
NEW YORK, July 23.—The trolley strike in Manhattan and Brooklyn seems practically at an end. General Master Workman Parsons says it is not, and he launched a scheme today for a new labor political party. Cars on all the lines in Brooklyn except one are running. The road accommodated all the traffic to the beaches. Cars on Second avenue, New York, are also running.

TO GIVE ALGER THE GLAD HAND.
DETROIT, Mich., July 23.—Secretary Alger will be welcomed by his fellow citizens on his return here in a manner calculated to cause him to forget any unpleasant feature connected with his administration of the war department. A number of prominent citizens met at the mayor's office to formulate plans for the reception.

CAR WRECKED BY AN EXPLOSION.
CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 23.—An Euclid avenue car, crowded with passengers, was wrecked by an explosion of nitro glycerine at eleven o'clock tonight. Four persons were badly hurt, and the front portion of the car was practically wrecked, the motorman, however, escaping without injury.

WILL REMAIN TEN DAYS LONGER.

SENATOR MASON'S VIEWS.

On Alger and Imperialism—He's Interviewed at York Harbor.
"I noticed by the papers that Alger has resigned. Well, now, I'm sorry to hear that. I think Alger is the most abused man that we have had in this country since the days of Stanton. During the Spanish war I saw him work from 16 to 20 hours a day. He has been honest and clean-handed. He made almost no personal appointment. I never went to him, night or day, for the benefit of Illinois troops that he did not set all his forces at work to assist, and some day the American people will feel more kindly and justly toward him than they do now."
The senator believes that both political parties will declare against imperialism next year. "Imperialism," says he, "is just like the itch among school children. It's got to have its run like all epidemics. Do you know, some of these administration fellows who are loudest in their shouting for the war amuse me very much? Take Hanna for instance. He was against war when I favored striking a blow to avenge the death of the boys of the Maine. Now he's thirsting for gore."
The issues in the next presidential campaign will be similar to those of the campaign of '96, except, perhaps, the Philippine question, and in that respect I shall be greatly surprised if both platforms and the speeches on both sides will not be about on the same lines.
"Who will win?"
"The republicans, provided they stand for liberty, as they always have, and I firmly believe always will."

TO GO TO WASHINGTON TODAY.
WASHINGTON, July 23.—Hon. Elihu Root, who is to succeed Russell A. Alger as secretary of war, telegraphed the president today that he will be here tomorrow. Mr. Root is desirous of having a conference with the president before the former leaves for Lake Champlain.

ELEVATOR BURNED.
TOLEDO, Ohio, July 23.—A large elevator was destroyed by fire tonight.

To Fortify Bailey's Hill.
LYNN, Mass., July 23.—The United States Government has begun preliminary surveys at Nahant for permanent fortifications on Bailey's Hill, the highest part of the peninsula. During the war with Spain the hill was occupied for temporary coast defense, and has since been used as a testing ground for the American Ordnance Company. The Government will complete the removal of the famous old Tricolumn House.

Incidendi Caught in the Act.
LANCASTER, Pa., July 23.—The warehouse of Philip Betz was destroyed by an incendiary fire and shortly afterward John Easley, a butcher occupying an adjoining property, was arrested as the incendiary. Betz told the police that he caught Easley in the act and seized him, but the man got away, though Betz fired his revolver at him. In his flight he left his hat behind. He was captured later.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE COTTAGE HOSPITAL.

Will some of the friends of the Cottage Hospital kindly look over their stores and see if they cannot find some worn sheets or old cotton or linen, which they will send to the hospital? The demand for such things is constant and the supply is running low.

I would also like to suggest to friends living either in town or country, who have gardens, that presents of fresh flowers, fruit or vegetables are always most gratefully received. Tired eyes longing for the beauties of the summer which they cannot behold, sickly appetites needing to be coaxed, convalescents slowly creeping up to strength, will all duly appreciate such thoughtful kindness. Freely ye have received, freely give.

WILL DISBURSE FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Pay Director George E. Cochran, U. S. N., will pay out about forty thousand dollars to the employees of the navy yard on Tuesday. He remarked to a Chronicle man on Saturday: "I hope to see our force at the yard increase to the number I paid at Norfolk where over four thousand men are employed. It is a pleasure for me to disburse money to the workmen."

LIGHTNING STRIKES AN ELIOT RESIDENCE.

EAGLE ARRIVES.

The Warship Comes Here For General Repairs.

Appeared In The Lower Harbor This Morning.

Yankton Also Coming--Means A Boom At The Yard.

The U. S. S. Eagle arrived at this port this morning from Key West. She came here to be docked and generally repaired. Her orders date back several weeks, and they were announced by the Herald at the time. The Yankton, a converted war ship almost similar to the Eagle, will also be repaired here.

It was about eight o'clock when the Eagle made the lower harbor. Her appearance occasioned considerable wonderment to those who did not know that she was expected today, and there were many guesses concerning her identity.

It was rumored about town that, she was flying a quarantine flag and that there was fever on board. This was not true.

The Eagle is built of steel, and is 160 feet long, 24 feet beam and 14 feet draft. She is of single screw, carries eight guns and is capable of steaming at a speed of fifteen knots. She has been on survey duty along the Cuban coast for the past six months, and is greatly in need of an extensive overhauling.

The Eagle is a staunch vessel and makes quite an imposing appearance. Her run up from Key West was without incident.

The Eagle came up to the navy yard after dinner and arrived at the storehouse dock at 1.45.

STORES ROBBED.

Somersworth Visited by Burglars Last Night.—Four of Them Captured at South Berwick Later.

Special to the Herald.

SOMERSWORTH, July 21.—Burglars visited this city last night and made an extensive raid upon a number of business establishments. It is supposed that they broke into the stove and general hardware store of Daniel Hodgdon first, obtaining entrance by cutting out the glass from a rear window. They secured three or four dollars in cash only, and presumably angry at their small haul, they proceeded to knock over stoves and make a mess of things generally.

Next they went to the New Hampshire Furniture store, kept by Charles Dunn, and tackled the cash register. Here again they got but a few dollars, so they smashed some costly lamps and otherwise damaged the goods.

Then they broke into McIntire's People's market, blew open the safe and were rewarded with fifty dollars. The cash register, which they wrecked, gave them ten dollars more. When they fled the town they left no clew.

(Special to the Herald)

SOUTH BERWICK, July 25.—Early this morning burglars entered the clothing store of M. M. Bartlett here and set off the burglar alarm which Mr. Bartlett had put into his house some time ago. He was speedily awakened, jumped from his bed and grabbing his shot gun ran for two of his neighbors. They also aroused themselves and all hurried to the store. There they came upon five burglars, and after a little scuffle succeeded in capturing four of them. The other got away, and it is thought he went toward Portsmouth.

TENDERED CLERKSHIP AT MANILA.

Julian F. Trask of Laconia, former commissioner of labor, has within two or three days been tendered the chief clerkship in the naval service at Manila. Whether he will decide to accept this billet in the far-off Philippines is not yet known. He has it under careful advisement. Mr. Trask's many friends all over the state are universally glad that good things are coming his way.

CONCERT AT SEA POINT.

The third in the series of free orchestral concerts at Sea Point will be given tomorrow evening. Hoyt's orchestra will be enlarged to eight pieces for the occasion, and the musicians will be stationed on the balcony, instead of in the dance hall, so that everybody may hear the selections. Special cars will run, as heretofore. Plenty of seats will be provided at the pavilion.

CITY BRIEFS.

She doesn't care for operas, the drama or the play, She doesn't care for housework—she isn't built that way; She doesn't care for dancing, for flowers or for books, She doesn't care for bloomers—she doesn't like their looks; She doesn't care for picnics, they freckle her and tan— The only thing she does care for is a marriageable man.

HAD RELATIVES IN YORK.

Charles Robinson Commits Suicide in a Concord Hotel.

Charles Robinson, whose mother and brother, H. F. Robinson, a merchant, live in Concord, committed suicide at the Commercial house, Concord, early Sunday morning, by using cyanide of potassium. He had relatives in York, Me., who were at once notified.

Robinson engaged a room at the hotel late Saturday evening. He asked for hot water and a cup, saying that he wished to shave himself. He was supplied and exclaimed, as he dipped his finger in the water: "That is just right." He paid for his lodging in advance, and left a call for 6 o'clock in the morning, stating that he wished to catch an early train. In the meantime he took from the hotel office several sheets of paper.

Sunday morning the call boy got no response when he knocked on the door of Robinson's room. He found the door unfastened and going in, commenced to shake Robinson. It soon dawned on him that the man was dead. A note was found on the bureau, asking the hotel proprietor to notify Mr. Robinson's relatives, and mentioning ill health as in a measure responsible for his act. Robinson had lived in Concord, off and on, and evidently he returned from New York or Vermont Saturday on an evening train, and called at the home of his mother, and after he was told the family was away, he appeared to be dejected, and suffering from some kind of a strain.

Ella was not condemned to the pillory—nor was she sent to the gallows. She was given a sentence of thirty days in jail, suspended if she kept away from her husband's people and off their premises.

Ella was in the city this morning, looking fresh and cool. She did not appear at all like the female Jesse James that she has been pictured.

FREEDOM FROM BAGGY KNEES

Is enjoyed by the wearers of trousers made by us and by Scotch friends who don't wear any.

The cut of these garments has much to do with the retention of their shapely appearance. We devote much care to their making and believe our methods and the fit of the Trousers to be unequalled.

Drop in and look at the line of Trousers we are showing. The designs are exclusive and the quality excellent.
